Andrew W. Mellon Summer Internship Program

Thanks to the generosity of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, the Michael C. Carlos Museum offers paid summer internships for Emory University students. The internship is open to graduate and undergraduate students. Interns are selected by a committee of Museum staff and faculty advisors. The internships are ten weeks in length, and students are paid a stipend of $5,000. This summer's internships begin on May 21, though some flexibility in scheduling is possible. Deadline for applying for the Mellon Internship is February 23, 2018.

This summer, the Carlos Museum seeks two interns to work with the Carlos Museum's Education Department, Emory Environmental Sciences faculty, and a K-12 classroom teacher on the development of a tour program and online teacher support materials that connect the collections of the Carlos Museum to the K-12 study of environmental science. The internship will include research on objects in the collection and on the geography, environments, and natural resources of the cultures that created them, particularly those objects related to water.
