HIERONYMUS BOSCH

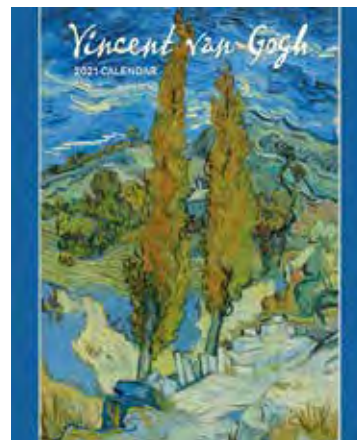

The Garden of Earthly Delights
